ARRANGEMENTS FOR THE INTERNATIONAL BOAT RACE.

London, August 25.

The Harvard and Oxford crews were rowed this morning, each three miles and return, over the course. The Harvards, who have been practicing on the Thames since their arrival, have been rowing with great vim, and showed to much advantage in the race. Their style is very fine, and they pull with the utmost regularity. The Oxfords, who have been practicing on the Isis, are not so powerful as the Harvards, but are very graceful in their movements. The Harvards rowed with a long, steady stroke, and the Oxfords with a short, quick one. The Harvards pulled thirty-two strokes per minute, and the Oxfords thirty-four. The Harvards were the favorites in the betting, and the odds were 2 to 1 on them.

TAMMANY HALL.

In the city of New York there exists a political organization known as the Tammany Society. Its ostensible object and purpose is humane in the extreme. It proposes to purify by casting charities. Its real object is to rule politics, commerce and private individuals, under the forms of law, for the benefit of a very small number of political managers. It has a benevolent, whose business it is to appoint Keepers of Museums, both general and primary, and to decide all Superintendencies of the "statuary" of Commissioners of Public Works, and particularly various legislative Tammany Halls can prove, to be whenever that the people of New York are going to do any property thing within the jurisdiction of the State, they appoint a Member for it, send a Bill of and press with a scrutiny to hurry up the vote coming in, and divide it among themselves. MONETARY.

WEDNESDAY EVENING, August 25.

The most prominent feature in general business to-day was the upward reaction in the price of gold, which has been steadily declining for a week waiting, in this case, the credit of the government is not involved. Yet, but in steadily improving both at home and abroad, as shown by the steady advance in the price of our bonds in Europe, which have risen from 1 to 1½ per cent in the last ten days having been equal to 1¼ cents in American gold; the prospect for large exports of breadstuffs, which will create a demand for bills, and consequently for gold; the necessity of exports of gold, to clear off our foreign account, has scarcely been so good since the war as at present; and, lastly, the cost of gold in London in the Bank of England is but only 2½ per cent per annum, and the best rate of discount is down to 2 per cent, with their reserve rising to 21½. All these circumstances favor a lower rate for gold than has been experienced before for several years. The only circumstance that affords any grounds for anticipating that the appreciation of gold may be checked, or that it will be fully realized, is the present high price at which cotton is held and the dull market for cotton goods, which has caused the closing of many of the Rhode Island mills, and so, by allowing the accumulation of cotton, to make the price of manufactured cotton goods dear, and thus check sales for the present. This, however, could have but a temporary effect, as it is to the interest of the planters as the bulk of the cotton crop will inevitably be exported sooner or later. The present upward movement in the price of gold is, therefore, attributable to nothing but the speculation of foreign bill clippers in New York—and it is probably to their interest to cause a corner in gold, as they have a large amount of bills on hand, and can thus realize a handsome profit.

The money market here remains without essential change. The banks continue well supplied with funds, and the demand for small loans on good call discount rises largely without inconvenience. They are loaning with tolerable freedom to all parties who can command good security, and are generally willing to accommodate to some extent beyond their ordinary line of business, so far as may be safe and profitable. The interior demand for currency is also moderate, and the movement of produce is quite free. The banks are, therefore, in a very favorable position, and are in a condition to meet any reasonable demand for accommodation.

BASE BALL.

There has, at last, been one series of base ball games played in Chicago which have been of a most exciting nature. We have at many of similar kind, during the past month or two, but they could do something else well, save play base ball. That they would never do.

Yesterday afternoon it was announced that the Chicago Clubs and Athlet would have a friendly contest at Union Park. The game was to commence at half-past 2 o'clock, and the first inning was called at 4. The first nine innings resulted—Athlet, 24; Chicago, 23. At the end of the tenth inning both clubs had scored 24 runs each, and a tenth inning to decide the contest. On the tenth inning the Athlet were scored by a majority of one tally.

The contest was the most exciting ever witnessed in this city, and the ball was batted to all parts of the field. The Athlet were victorious by the score of 25 to 24, as follows:

The following is

[Scorecard: Chicago City — O. B. | T. B. | P. O. | A. | E. — Total 24 | 24 | 30 | 27 | 10. Athlet — O. B. | T. B. | P. O. | A. | E. — Total 25 | 25 | 30 | 27 | 10.]

[Scorecard: Chicago City — O. B. | T. B. | P. O. | A. | E. — Total 24 | 24 | 30 | 27 | 10. Athlet — O. B. | T. B. | P. O. | A. | E. — Total 25 | 25 | 30 | 27 | 10.]

Umpire Wheeler went in for manufacturing.

The Athlet will play the Chicago Club at 3:30 to-day at the Union Park Grounds.

The association met at 2 p. m., President Allyn in the chair.

ATHENS, 800 PLACE IS HISTORY.

Mr. Dalrymple, of the Chicago Athlet Club, of Chicago, Dalrymple, was called upon to read a paper on the subject of "Athens, Its Place in History," he did so. Mr. Dalrymple, after a few remarks, read the paper, which was quite an able production. The first was on the ancient history of Athens, and the second on the modern history of Athens. The first was very interesting, and was listened to with marked attention. The second was also very interesting, and was listened to with marked attention. The second was also very interesting, and was listened to with marked attention.

Professor Wheeler then read a paper on "Athens, Its Place in History," which was quite an able production. The first was on the ancient history of Athens, and the second on the modern history of Athens. The first was very interesting, and was listened to with marked attention. The second was also very interesting, and was listened to with marked attention.

The association then adjourned to meet at 8 p. m. in the Methodist Church.
